His Life Work Finished Gen. Booth Passes Away.

London, Aug. 20.—William Booth, General and Commander-in-Chief of the Salvation Army, passed away at 10.30 o'clock to-night. He was born at Nottingham in 1829.

The veteran Salvation Army leader was unconscious for 48 hours previous to his death. The medical bulletin had not revealed the seriousness of the General's condition, which for a week past, it is now admitted, was hopeless.

Twelve weeks ago General Booth underwent an operation for the removal of a cataract in his left eye. For two days after the operation indications justified the hope of the General's recovery. Then, however, septic poisoning set in, and from that time, with the exception of occasional rallies, the patients health steadily declined. The General recognized that the end was near and often spoke of his work as being finished.

Throughout the Commander-in-Chief's illness, his son, Bramwell Booth, Chief of Staff of the Army, and Mrs. Bramwell Booth gave their unremitting attentions to him both night and day.

DIED AT HIS RESIDENCE.

The aged evangelist died at his residence, The Rookstone, Hadley Wood, some eight miles from London, where he had been confined to his bed ever since the operation. Present at the bedside when the end came were Mr. and Mrs. Bramwell Booth and their daughter and son, Adjutant Catherine Booth and Sergeant Bernard Booth; the General's youngest daughter, Commissioner Mrs. Booth-Helbred, and Commissioner Howard, Colonel Kitching and Dr. Wardlaw Milne.

SKETCH OF HIS LIFE.

The late Rev. William Booth was born at Nottingham, England on April 10th, 1829, and was thus in his eighty-fourth year. He was educated at a private school in that town, and studied theology with the Rev. William Cooke, D. D., and became a minister of the Methodist New Connexion in 1850, being appointed mostly to hold special evangelistic services to which he felt so strongly drawn, that when the conference of 1861 required him to settle in the ordinary circuit work, he resigned and began his labors as an evangelist amongst the churches wherever he had an opportunity. Coming in this capacity to London, he observed that the vast majority of the people attended no place of worship and he commenced "The Christian Mission" in July, 1865. To this mission, when it had become a large organization, formed upon military lines, he gave in 1878 the name of "The Salvation Army," under which it soon became very widely known and grew rapidly. In succeeding years it spread to the United States, Canada, France, Australia, India, the Cape of Good Hope and Sweden. Booth became the general

WALNUT GROVE.

On Wednesday of last week Master Eddie Buck, little son of Mr. and Mrs. Miles Buck, fell off the wagon and had his leg broken a little way above the knee by the wheel passing over it. The same day Azel Buck was thrown by his horse while leading it to water. An anto came along and frightened the animal, which threw Mr. Buck on a stone and fractured a rib, besides other injuries. Dr. Northmore was called at once to attend both patients.

Such Hard Luck.

"I've got the grip."
"Is that all?"
"The grip has got me."

name of "The Salvation Army," under which it soon became very widely known and grew rapidly. In succeeding years it spread to the United States, Canada, France, Australia, India, the Cape of Good Hope and Sweden. Booth became the general of this great army, now numbering some millions. The general published a number of books. In 1880 he established the War Cry as a weekly magazine of the army, and it is published in various countries.

THE NEW GENERAL.

London, Aug. 21.—In the presence of all the Salvation Army Commissioners and the principal officers in London at the International Head-quarters on Queen Victoria street, General Booth's testament, entrusted to the Army's solicitor twenty-two years ago, appointing the late Commander-in-chief's son, Bramwell Booth, to succeed him, was opened to-day and read.

Bramwell Booth, who has been Chief of Staff of the Salvation Army since 1899, accepted the succession formally with much feeling. His speech was a prayer, and the Scriptural reading was followed by an impressive service. Mrs. Bramwell Booth and Mrs. Booth-Helberd and other well-known Army leaders were among the participants.

FUNERAL ON THE 29th.

General Booth's funeral will be held on the afternoon of August 29th at Abney Park Cemetery, in Stoke-Newington, where his wife is buried. The funeral procession from the International Headquarters, which will pass through some of the principal thoroughfares of the city, will start at noon. Many thousands of persons are expected to participate in the funeral service for the Army, which will be held on the preceding night at the great Hall of Olympia, the scene of the International horse shows and exhibitions, which has been chosen for its spaciousness.

Several newspapers suggest that the General's work entitles him to lie in Westminster Abbey or St. Paul's Cathedral, where many other of the nation's greatest heroes of war and peace are entombed, but his wish was to be buried beside his wife, and it is doubtful if the Church authorities will make the offer to place the body in the Cathedral.

OUTLAW IS RUN

Notorious Elephant Poacher In Equatorial Africa

Dramatic Story Comes From Fox, the British Officer Sent to Capture James, the White King of t—Old Man Protected Companion to the Last.

London, Aug. 20.—Hunted British soldiers in the deep jungles of Central Africa, several years in defiance of authority, he had pursued the elephant poacher and trader, James Ward Rogers, can, is dead. He was shot a little force of troops which sent into the wilderness with orders not to return without, dead or alive.

News of Rogers' death came yesterday to the British Office from Capt. V. T. Fox, of Mongolia province, who led the expedition. Although official report, the story is one of the most dramatic in annals.

For years Rogers had carried lawless trade, which popularly credited with netting him. The remote regions along the enclaves and Congo bound the scenes of his operations. At the time the British official Soudan had tried in vain to determine the Government the old man.

Capt. Fox's report shows that long operations Rogers had than had been dreamed of in the colonial Office. He had established organized administration over trackless country and amovatives was a virtual uncrowd.

The success of the outlawing his "subjects" and in the of his trade drew from Capt. his report, the tribute to work was worthy of a better.

Not since the explorer, Stanley, pierced the jungle and found Dr. Livingstone, a tale of hardships, trials at come out of Africa.

For the purpose of tracking law, the English commander on a non-commissioned and six Soudanese soldiers. riers and mules for the transport of supplies were part of the ment. His instructions were not to return until the outlaw was captured.

With a soldier's disregard for tape, Capt. Fox, in his report to mention dates in describing the hunt. Apparently the ment of the jungle drama came months ago.

The pursuers then had plunged through the jungle most defied passage, Rogers leading them through the swamps, forests and across streams. Before the outlaw taken he had crossed the Ni Belgian Congo, after a fight Rogers was fatally wounded found him with a white dress. After a brief confession died.

Throughout his talk with Rogers shielded his white and did not reveal his identity. Fox's report also is singular in this respect as he says

May Tie Up Trade.

Brandon, Man., Aug. 20.—Asserting that they will tie up all building operations in Brandon if their demands are not conceded, striking laborers are to-day awaiting a reply to their petition to the Minister of Labor at Ottawa and refuse to consider any advances toward a settlement by contractors unless the latter agree to place the scale of wages, 27 1-2 cents an hour. The men who first went out were working on the new insane asylum and have since been joined by many laborers on the new winter fair arena and St. Matthew's Church. Several contractors have signified their willingness to agree to the new rate, but, with no master builders' organization here, the matter is in a very unsettled condition.

Efforts are being made by several contractors to hold a meeting of master builders to discuss the situation.

The petition sets forth five of the charges which the Government had stated in a manifesto had been proved and then adds rebutting comment. It requests President Yuan Shi Kai to answer within three days and says if his reply should be unsatisfactory the National Assembly will summon him to explain in person. If his personal explanation should prove unsatisfactory then the House will impeach President Yuan Shi Kai, or the whole Chinese Government.

The news has caused a great commotion in Peking. Dr. Sun's son and daughter are on the Pacific coast.

ROBS STEAMBOAT OFFICE.

Then Fantastic Thief Sends $100 Back to Victim.

Toledo, O., Aug. 20.—Nearly $1,000, mostly in currency and the rest in checks, was filched from the office of the Detroit & Cleveland Navigation Co.'s offices here yesterday in a bold daylight robbery. An hour later the robber returned $100 to the company through a third person.

According to a statement made at the office of the company, T. A. Heaton, ticket agent, was making up his daily deposit when a poorly-dressed stranger presented a ticket for some baggage, an errand on which he had been sent by another man. John Mc-Arthur, general agent of the company, was in another part of the building. No other employees were about. Leaving the money in sight on top of his desk in the ticket agent's cage, Heaton went to the baggage room, locking the door of the cage with a spring lock. During his absence the stranger went through a rear door and crawled into the cage through a small window in the rear.
Heaton returned to the waiting room in time to see the stranger walk from the door of the cage. The man fled, pursued by Heaton, who soon lost sight of the fugitive.

An hour later the man who had employed the robber to get his baggage brought $100 to the company's office. He said that the man had run up to him at the corner where he had appointed him to bring the baggage.
The thief had his hands stuffed with money.

The robber thrust the smaller bundle of money into the other man's hands, telling him that it belonged to the Navigation Co. and asking him to return it. Nonplussed, the man, whose name was not obtained by the Navigation Co., did not attempt to delay the other.

ALL STAKING CLAIMS

Wild Confusion Reigns at the Newly-Opened Gillies' Limits and Prospectors Are Employing All Sorts of Strategic Means to Record Properties—Big Cobalt Mines Have Their Representatives Present.

Haileybury, Ont., Aug. 20.—Camp fires on the hills in Gillies Limits loomed up last night like beacon lights at ocean ports, while fifteen hundred men rushed madly at the work of staking two hundred claims in hopes of locating more silver mines that will add to the wealth produced by present Cobalt shippers. A copious rainfall added to the discomforts of the night-workers.

At the hour of midnight the four thousand acres recently thrown open by the Government became a mecca of active prospecting and tents that hid corner stakes which had been set days ago were torn down, unmasking the work that had been done in secret in contravention of the mining laws.

At two o'clock the staking had been completed in a majority of cases, and then began the race for the Haileybury recording office. Prospectors anticipating that unquestionably legal difficulties will follow in many cases where claims prove valuable, sought to add strength to their case by getting on record at the recording office in advance of others. Every saddle horse, carriage and automobile available was pressed into service, and for hours a mad marathon was run over the stone roads of Coleman and Bucket Townships to the town of Haileybury.

A scene of strife was already staged at the recording office door. As early as 6 o'clock Monday night watchers were stationed "for place" and as soon as a prospector arrived from the limits the one who kept vigil at the door in his behalf vacated. The prospector took the watcher's place and thus was placed in a position to record.

his wife and three children, set his house afire and then committed suicide. The story is one of the most revolting tragedies that has occurred in England in recent years.

Capt. Hicks Murray, formerly of the Gordon Highlanders, some seven or eight years ago took as his mistress Florence Taylor, a young woman of respectable family, and two years ago he married Florence's younger sister, Edith.

By the Taylor woman Murray had two children by his wife one. Mrs. Murray did not live with her husband long, but her sister remained in the house.

Representing himself as Richard Charles Mackie, an American, the former army officer a few weeks ago rented a house in Eastbourne, a fashionable watering place 66 miles south-west of London, installing there the Taylor woman and their two children. Last Sunday night the legal wife and child appeared on the scene and the tragedy followed. Murray in a fit of frenzy whipped out a revolver and shot his wife and the three little ones dead. He also fired two shots at the Taylor woman, both bullets taking effect, and then, after setting fire to the house, committed suicide. The bodies of the five killed were found charred in the ruins of the building.

The injured woman was taken to a hospital, where she lies in an hysterical condition. She was visited at the hospital yesterday by another sister, who said that her brother-in-law was formerly a captain of the Scots Greys and later was connected with the Ter- ritorialists. He had twice suffered from sunstroke while in India, she said, and had shown signs of insanity, for a time having been confined in an asylum.

Motor Cyclist Hurt.

Galt, Aug. 20.—While driving to Galt from Guelph Sunday morning, Peter Brown of Guelph found a man lying unconscious by the roadside, a mile and a half from Hespeler. He was apparently very badly hurt and efforts to revive him were unavailing. Mr. Brown took the injured man into his rig and raced his horse to the office of Dr. Lockhart, Hespeler, where an examination showed a broken hip and several crushed ribs. The man proved to be Charles Raymond, Guelph, motor cyclist, who, out on a spin, came to grief. A motor car took him home, where he lies in a precarious condition.

Police Wanted Schepps.

New York, Aug. 20.—Two attempts were made by the police yesterday to wrest away from District Attorney Whitman, Sam Schepps, who proved himself yesterday to Mr. Whitman's satisfaction the most important witness, aside from those accused of complicity in the crime, as yet produced in the investigation of Herman Rosenthal's death.

The attempts were made first on the train which was bearing Schepps to this city from Albany on the last stage of his journey from Hot Springs, Ark., and again at the Grand Central station, when Schepps was rushed into a taxicab and hustled to the West Side Court, where he now occupies a cell on the technical charge of vagrancy limits the one who kept vigil at the door in his behalf vacated. The pros- pector took the watcher's place and thus was placed in a position to re- cord early.

Not alone were men in the struggle for claims. Mrs. Thomas Rogers assumed a position at the very door of the recording office in behalf of her husband.

All the big Cobalt mines had pros- pectors on the limits holding claims for the past week. A seam of calcite was sufficient to call for a heavy guard.

The formation in the portion of the limits thrown open in Keewatin and conglomerate with patches of diabase. Mine men contend that in order to make mines here, should conditions prove right, that great depth must be attained.

A peculiar feature is that not one per cent. of those staking expect to make finds that will warrant future work on the claims, but stake their hopes on the liability of someone find- ing a high grade vein. Rumors are rife that no claim will be accepted which was staked before daylight. Morning will see a tremendous struggle for position before the door of the recording office.

Old prospectors are taking their time in staking, blazing all the lines, and will not attempt to record before to-morrow. There will follow the legal disputes.

Port Arthur Truckers Out.

Port Arthur, Ont., Aug. 20.—The truckers in the Canadian Northern sheds went on strike yesterday. About 1,000 men are out and no boats are being unloaded. The men want an increase of about eight cents an hour, and their representatives met in con- ference with company officials yester- day afternoon. A compromise is said to be likely.

JUST HAPPEN ALONG.

FROM nowhere comes a topic
For story, rime or jest.
I look at books and pictures,
And nothing they suggest.
And after vainly searching And looking everywhere
When time has come for writing
I grab one from the air.

It seems there are no topics
But what are stale and flat,
Each one used three times over
And maybe more than that.
The list has been exhausted—
They were at best too few—
And now the writing person Can think of nothing new.

The census and the ladies,
The cowboys in the west,
The one who meets temptation
And bravely stands the test,
The man of little breeding
Who loves a lady fair—
All these have been exhausted,
And so I try the air.

And were we not surrounded
As by a silent sea
With topics universal
How rotten it would be!
Enough to make a fellow Discouraged, dazed and blue
To sit down at the writer
And try for something new.

Curious.

"They had a quiet wedding."

"I wonder how long the married pair will keep that up."

"What, the wedding?"

"No; the quiet."

FORCIBLE FEEDING.

English Suffragette Tells How the Treatment Feels.

An interesting account of a suffragette's "hunger strike" in an English prison appears in a London magazine. The article is purported to be written by one of the participants, and she tells of the methods employed to feed her:

I was arrested for window-smashing, together with about twenty other suffragettes, and sentenced to one month's imprisonment in the third division.

This meant that we were classed as ordinary prisoners. We resented this, and determined to protest.

At first our resistance was merely passive. We refused to dress ourselves in the prison clothes, or to occupy ourselves with the usual prison tasks which prisoners are supposed to perform. For acting in this manner we were punished by solitary confinement on bread and water.

We next determined to smash the windows of our cells. This was done by all of us simultaneously one day in the dinner hour, the signal being the words "No sur-render!"—the words being set to the chimes of big Ben.

As soon as this signal was given by our leader, from every cell where one of our comrades was imprisoned there came the answering chimes. "No sur-render!" followed immediately by the sound of breaking glass.

For this we were given longer terms of solitary confinement in the punishment cells. The only further protest then left us was the hunger strike, and this was started on the following morning, I, of course, joining in.

For four days no food of any kind passed my lips, although, directly the prison authorities saw that I was in earnest, every effort was made to tempt me to break my resolution. In place of the dry, coarse brown bread and plain cold water, custard pudding and hot milk were placed in my cell, filling it with fragrance.

I used to warm my hands on the outside of the pudding basin and the mug until the contents grew cold, and once or twice I allowed myself the luxury of sniffing up the hot, delicious steam that rose from them when they were first brought in by the wardress.

On the morning of the fifth day while the wardresses were dressing me—I refused all along to put on the prison clothes of my own accord—I fainted dead away, remaining uncon-

On the morning of the fifth day while the wardresses were dressing me—I refused all along to put on the prison clothes of my own accord—I fainted dead away, remaining unconscious, I was told, for over half an hour. On my recovery the doctor ordered me to be forcibly fed.

I at once said that I intended to resist to the best of my ability, so four wardresses were told off to hold my hands and feet.

First they stretched my limbs to their full length. Next a steel wedge-shaped gag was forced between my teeth prising them open, then a tube was thrust down my throat, and a whole quart of liquid food was poured through it, almost without stopping. I felt like a bottle filled up to the neck.

Other days, the proceeding was varied by forcing a stiff mess of brown bread and milk and minced beef down my throat. When I tried not to swallow it they held my nose so that I could not breathe.

As a result of this treatment I suffered terribly from indigestion, and the most frightful depression of spirits.

This forcible feeding went on for nearly three weeks, during the whole of which time I can truthfully say I was never free from pain.

During the last week, indeed, the inside of my mouth became badly ulcerated from the constant friction of the metal gag, and they had in consequence to use the nasal tube. This did not hurt quite as much, but as the food they were able to pass through it was of a less substantial and nourishing nature I grew terribly weak.

At length the welcome day of my release came round. Before going out I was taken to be weighed. Wardresses and doctors gasped when they saw the result, and one of the latter started to shake and rattle the machine to see if there were anything wrong with it.

I had lost twenty-eight pounds—practically one pound for each day of my imprisonment.

She Gathered the "Lions."

In former years, when she was Lady Jeune and her second husband, Sir Francis Jeune, was alive, Lady St. Helier was one of the most popular hostesses in London. Her salon was the recognized meeting place for "lions" of every description.

Indeed, so varied were the guests made welcome there that a famous wit who had been invited to attend a notorious murder trial replied:

"No, I don't think I'll go, thanks. If the poor wretch is condemned it will be too painful. If he's released, why, I expect I'll meet him at Lady Jeune's."

Odd English Customs.

England can boast of more quaint customs and ceremonies that have been handed down from century to century than any other civilized nation. The sounding of the mayor's horn at Ripon is one of the most ancient customs in the kingdom. It formerly announced the setting of the watch, but it has now lapsed into the formality of three blasts given at 9 o'clock every evening at the mayor's residence by his official hornblower and three more at the market cross.

Brantford Expositor—Farmers need not fear that enough corn and cattle will ever be raised again to make the business unprofitable, which it has been at times in the past to the small farmer. Hamilton Times—Every once in a while we come across items headed "Live Wire Causes Lineman's Death," or some such heading, where the death is recorded of linemen and others coming in contact with a live wire while at work. So often do these accidents occur that the brakeman's job has become in comparison a haven of safety. Cannot Edison or some other scientist invent some appliances to save these men's lives.

Winnipeg Tribune—Canada's great increase in population on these western plains is not due to protection; the people have come in spite of protection and high tariffs. It is the development of the land and the hundreds of millions of bushels of grain annually produced on these prairies that have brought prosperity. The greatest barrier to continued prosperity is restriction in markets, and the losses suffered by the basic producers because of a hostile tariff, which we had the opportunity to remove a few months ago, and which we still have the chance to remove if the people of Canada are true to themselves.

Montreal Star—In England there are two views of the "German danger" and Britain's preparation to meet it. One is that the Liberal Government is doing enough; and the other is that it isn't. In Canada there are also two views. One is that the Liberal Government is doing enough; and the other is that it is doing too much. In England, nobody takes the ground that there is no "danger." In Canada, that is the ground taken by those who attack the Churchill manner and the Churchill programme. Among those in Canada who think that there is no "danger" worth talking about, are The Montreal Gazette and Mr. Henri Bourassa. If anyone will tell us how The Gazette got into that position and into that company, we will be willing to pay a liberal reward.

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

Gift said that it required a operation upon a Scotsman point of a joke. No doubt it was referred to an Englishman. Certainly a recent writer has examples of Scottish wit. A young Englishman at a party composed of Scotsmen attempted to crack a joke failing to evoke a smile from his companions. He became exasperated and exclaimed, "Why, it would be a joke to put a joke into the mouth of a Scotchman!" One of the Scotsmen replied, "Aye, but the gimlet in the eye of the mair pointed than that!" A clergyman in the audience was reproving a man for his habits of intemperance represented to him that his greatest enemy. "Are you in Scripture to love our enemies?" said the irreverent backer. ## WHAT CAUSES STAGGERS.

Use of Corn Unfit For Horse Feed Brings the Disease.

In a bulletin of the Kansas station T. P. Haslam gives a brief summary of investigations of the disease of horses variously known as staggers, blind staggers, sleepy staggers and mad staggers. This disease has occurred in outbreaks of greater or less severity in many sections, Kansas, Texas, Louisiana, North Carolina, Delaware and Arkansas having apparently experienced the most trouble.

The first symptoms of the disease are usually a refusal of food and a desire for water, often accompanied by some difficulty in swallowing.

Following this there are dullness and drooping of the ears, partial or complete blindness, loss of consciousness, delirium and death or, in a few cases, recovery. Some cases become violent, running over obstacles, through fences or destroying stalls in a frenzy of excitement. Animals suffering from this form ("mad staggers") are irresponsible and must be approached with caution. If the animal does not die in this stage of the disease it usually becomes quiet or stupid ("sleepy staggers"), leans against the side of the stall or manger or pushes its head against a wall, often standing with the legs braced. Sometimes animals in the stupid state of the disease are thrown into a frenzy by the least excitement or irritation. Animals suffering from this disease, if they can be induced to move, generally go in a circle, either to the right or left, depending on which side of the brain is most seriously diseased. The disease is not contagious and attacks no animals except horses, mules and asses.

A severe outbreak of the disease in Kansas was investigated with a view of ascertaining the cause of the disease. The conclusion was reached that it was due to mold which had badly damaged the small crop of corn grown that year because of dry weather. There has also seemed to be a continual loss of horses from staggers in any locality in which much corn of an inferior grade is fed.

In investigations made during the outbreak in 1906 Haslam found that in some localities cases which were reported as staggers were in reality, typical cases of parasitism produced in horses by the pallid worm in the intestines and blood vessels, the error arising from the similarity of some of the symptoms of the two diseases. Those familiar with the course of either disease rarely make this mistake.

It is stated that there are few authentic records of cases occurring in Kansas with horses which had not been fed on corn, although in other states severe losses of horses have occurred when the grass in the pastures became moldy.

From a practical point of view the relation between moldy, wormy or decomposing corn or other food and staggers has been quite thoroughly demonstrated.

Don't Forget the Horse.

When you go to the field on a hot day you take some drinking water along for yourself, but how about the horses? They get more thirsty in drawing the plow than you do in holding it, and they feel the need of a drink as much as you do. So put some in the wagon for them, too, if it's only a bucketful between them. They will not be so likely to overdrink when they get back to the stable for dinner. —Farm Journal.

When Your Plow Needs Fixing.

A method of making tongs to hold plowshares is described by a correspondent of the Blacksmith and Wheelwright as follows: First make one side of the tongs to fit on the share, Fig. 1, same as the land bar, with a hole that corresponds with the hole in the share on the land side, and make the other jaw of the tongs as an ordinary flat tong with a pin, so that when the handles are pressed together the pin will go through the hole in the land side of the share and the other jaw of the tongs. The jaw on handle A, Fig. 2, must fit the same as the land bar. With these tongs I hold my shares just as if a land bar were bolted on.

Buckwheat.

Buckwheat is one of the few grain crops which may be planted about the middle of July with a prospect of a good yield, the crop maturing about the middle of September. Drill in one bushel of seed to the acre. Some good farmers add three pecks of rye per acre and after the buckwheat is off pasture the rye to keep it from heading. —Farm Journal.

Where crop yields have fallen off following continuous cropping with a single tilled crop there are an uneven distribution of plant food and lack of humus. Practice rotation of crops with green manuring and stable manuring.

FOR FLETCHER'S
CASTORIA

Many farmers who wish to tile drain their land cannot do so because of the scarcity of labor. In other counties of Ontario, tile ditching machines are used with great success. A tile ditcher will be brought into Lennox and Addington counties if sufficient work can be obtained to warrant its purchase. The machine digs at the rate of three feet per minute three feet deep, in land free from stone, or at the rate of 80 to 100 rods a day. The ditch bottom is dug true to grade ready to lay the tile. With the tile ditcher, tile draining may be done with a minimum of extra labor and boarding of help. Farmers who would probably tile drain either this season or in 1913 if a machine were available are invited to write Mr. G. B. Curran, Agricultural Office, Napanee, stating number of acres requiring tiling, and nature of land, stoney, rolling or flat. N. B.—Farmers are under no obligation by writing in this information. I merely wish to find out what demand there is for a tile ditcher in Lennox and Addington counties.

Celebrating Their Silver Wedding.

The completion of twenty-five years of married life was the occasion of a most enjoyable "At Home" last night at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Miles S. Plumley, 15 Queenston street, when over sixty sons, daughters and relatives and friends joined in expressing every good wish to the bride and groom of a quarter of a century ago. Mr. and Mrs. Plumley were united in marriage at Napanee by Rev. Alexander Young and during the changing scenes of life in the years that have intervened, their family ties have become strong and happy. Many old associates were present to renew former memories and to congratulate the heads of the home on their health and prosperity. The house was prettily decorated for the event and every hospitality was shown. At the supper Mr. W. S. Wilson proposed a toast to the bride and groom of to-day. Mr. Plumley replied in apt words remarking that one of the pleasures of life was true and lasting friends and their door was always open to the welcome of all. The guests drank heartily to the toasts and gave songs and cheers to the host and hostess. Many fine silver presents testified to the esteem in which Mr. and Mrs. Plumley are held. Among those from outside places were Mr. D. Latimer, Miss Little, Mrs. Wm. Gavin, all of Toronto; Mrs. P. A. Huffman, Napanee; Mrs. Gill, Schenectady, N. Y. Games, music and songs were pastimes. The Journal joins with others in wishing Mr. and Mrs. Plumley many more anniversaries of their wedding day.—St. Catharines Journal, Aug. 17.

The Sacred Bo Tree.

On the night of October 7, 1887, the tree worshippers of Ceylon met with an irreparable calamity. During one of the worst storms that ever raged on the island their sacred bo tree was thrown to the ground. The oldest written description of this wonderful tree known to exist is that of Fa Hiam, a Chinese historian and traveler, who visited the tree in the year 414 A. D. According to the learned Chinaman, it was then 702 years old, having been planted by King Devinipatisa in the year 288 before our era began. If the above data be correct, and there is no reason for doubting it, the bo tree was more than 2,175 years old when the storm ended its career on the date mentioned above.

Relieved the Situation.

Once when Justin McCarthy had called on Dean Stanley and they were conversing Matthew Arnold was announced, and the dean, addressing the new arrival, said, "Come here, Matt, and let me bring you face to face with the man who says you are only a miniature Goethe." McCarthy was naturally embarrassed at the repetition of a remark that seemed to be ill-natured. "Oh, come, now, I didn't say only a miniature Goethe," he stammered, but Arnold promptly relieved the situation by remarking with a winning smile, "If he could only convince me that I am a miniature Goethe how proud of myself he would make me."

Justice to Come.

Lord Cockburn, though a successful defender of prisoners, failed on one occasion to get an acquittal for a murderer. "The culprit," Mr. Croak James tells us in his "Curiosities of Law and Lawyers," "after the sentence fixing his execution for the 20th day of the month had not been removed from the dock when his counsel passed him and was then seized by the gown. The prisoner said, 'I have not got justice, Mr. Cockburn,' to which the counsel gravely replied, 'Perhaps not, but you'll get it on the 20th.'"

FATHER'S NEGLECT

CAUSES SORE TRIALS.

"If Father Had Only Made a Will We Could Have Avoided All This Trouble."

This was the cry of a woman in whose family there had been disagreements and heartburnings over the division of a small estate.

There were only a few things to divide—just a small farm and a few cattle, but the family could not agree. The little place had to be sold quickly for less than it was worth and the family is hopelessly divided.

All such trouble could have been avoided at an expense of 35 cents for a BAX Will Form. It is a duty that every man owes to his family, whether he has thousands or hundreds to leave, to make a positively indisputable will. Attend to this important matter at once.

BAX Legal Will Forms are copy-righted. With each form there is furnished a specimen will properly filled out and full instructions for your guidance.

For sale by all druggists and stationers at 35 cents, or sent on receipt of price by the BAX Will Form Company, 280 College street, Toronto. For sale by A. E. Paul, Napanee.

DESERONTO ROAD.

For last week.

The long looked for rain arrived on Wednesday of last week and continued on Thursday and Sunday much to the delight of the farmers.

Threshing has commenced again. Mr. Wm. Cade with his traction engine is on deck and ready for business, Wallace Amey being the first farmer to engage him.

Mr. Percy Bowen, of the Standard Bank, arrived home last week to spend his vacation with his father, Mr. Fred Bowen, near the Boundary.

A new cement bridge has just been completed west of Will Bowen's and is a most substantial affair and was much needed as the old structure was entirely undermined and gone. In the meantime as the work was progressing travel that way was diverted through Will Bowen's orchard, and during the rainy weather the sod became cut up and travel for auto's was rather disagreeable.

Save Babies' Lives. For Babies and Small Children. (Made in France.)

Dr. Hennequin's Infant Tablets saved our little girl's life. Three doctors said she would not live. The Tablets cured her.—MR. E. R. McBRIDE, Napanee, Ont.

My baby was so weak from sickness that he could hardly walk. We thought he would die. We could find nothing to help him. I was given a sample package of three Hennequin Tablets; we used them; I saw a change at once. We secured the Tablets and our baby improved every day and is now a bright, fat, good natured boy; you could not believe he was the same child. They certainly cured my baby and saved his life. I believe them to be the best medicine ever sold for babies. Mothers if your babies are not well take my advice and try these Tablets.—MRS. JAMES RIDDELL, Barrydale, Ont.

We have hundreds of such letters. If the Tablets were not what you need we would not offer to give them away and prepay them. If your baby is not well send for trial package. Hennequin Tablets have the letter "H" stamped upon them—this is your guarantee. All dealers, 25c per package, or 5 for $1.00 sent postpaid to any address.

SETTLING IN ONTARIO.

Farm Laborers Are Doing Well In Older Province.

The impression that has generally existed that the immigration season from Great Britain to Canada, and especially to Ontario, closes with the end of spring, is effectually put down with the figures for this season. Not only is the immigration season far from over for this year, but so far for July 3,414 British immigrants have been distributed among the farmers of Ontario. This is practically double the number for the same period of any previous year, and the tide of immigration is still pouring in, on some occasions during the month nearly four hundred coming in on one day.

The number of British immigrants distributed throughout the province so far this season, has now reached the twenty-five thousand mark, and easily established a record.

Discussing the situation recently, the Dominion Immigration Agent for Ontario, George L. Stewart, said the main difficulty they had now to contend with was the migration of immigrants to the west after they had spent a few months in Ontario. This was to be deplored, not only as it was proving a hardship for the Ontario farmers, but to the British settlers themselves. With the exception of the western harvest season, the farm laborer averaged far better in Ontario than in the west. Not only did he receive practically as high a wage, but expenses being less in Ontario,
he was able to save more

Montreal Grain and Produce.

MONTREAL, Aug. 19.—The demand from foreign buyers for new crop Manitoba spring wheat and old crop grades is fairly good and a fair amount of business was done in the latter, but the prices bid for the former were 1c per bushel under cost. There is also a good demand for oats, but owing to the high rates of ocean freights demanded and the difficulty to buy oats in the west little business was done. The local market is stronger at an advance of 1/4c, with a fair trade passing. Demand for flour fair and market steady. Millfeed active and firm. Butter 493 hogs, 794 sheep and lambs and 177 calves.

Exporters.

The Swifts of Chicago were the only buyers of export cattle, their buyer, Mr. Howard, getting, all told, 135 cattle, as follows: For the London market, 75 steers, 1310 lbs. each, at $7.10 to $7.25, and only one load at the latter figure; for Liverpool, 110 steers, 1247 lbs. each, at $6.80 to $7.10.

Butchers Cattle.

Choice picked lots, of which there were few, sold at $6.85 to $6.90; loads of good to choice, $6.50 to $6.80; good, $6 to $6.25; medium, $5.25 to $5.50; common, $4.50 to $5; choice cows, $5 to $5.25; good, $4.50 to $4.75; common and medium, $3 to $4; canners, $3 to $4.

Stockers and Feeders.

There were 30 steers of good quality, 1000 lbs. each, bought at $5.25 to $5.60; stockers, $4 to $4.75.

Milkers and Springers.

A moderate supply of milkers and springers sold at $50 to $80 each. More good cows would have sold.

Veals Claves.

The veal calves on sale sold at $3 to $3.25, and three or four choice quality at $3.50 to $3.75 per cwt.

Sheep and Lambs.

Sheep, ewes, sold at $4.25 to $4.75 for light, with a very few selects at $5; heavy ewes and rams, $3 to $3.50; lambs, $5 to $6.40, but a few selected sold at $6.50 and $6.65.

Hogs.

Selects, fed and watered, sold at $3.60 to $3.65, and $3.25 f.o.b. cars. The bulk sold at these prices, but two or three lots were reported at $3.70 and $3.75.

Montreal Live Stock.

MONTREAL, Aug. 19.—At the Montreal Stock Yards, West End Market, the receipts of live stock for the week ended Aug. 17, were 1300 cattle, 2300 sheep and lambs, 2600 hogs and 600 calves. The offerings on the market this morning were 950 cattle, 1600 sheep and lambs, 1500 hogs and 250 calves.

Owing to the continued very limited supply of good to choice butchers' cattle the market for such was stronger and 25c per cwt. higher for picked lots. Owing to the scarcity of top quality, Ontario stock, some Manitoba beef met with good demand. Sales were made at $6.25 to $6.50 and picked lots at $6.25 per cwt. The gathering of local buyers was large and as the weather is now more favorable for keeping stock the demand was good, packers taking a number of car loads, consequently the trade thruout was active. There was also a good demand from canners for beef and sales of bulls were made at $2.50 to $3 and cows at $3.50 to $4 per cwt.

There was no change in the condition of the market for selected hogs; prices being firm owing to the small supplies of such coming forward, but the tone of the market for rough stock was easier as the bulk of offerings consisted of such. The demand for packers was good and an active trade was done with sales of selected lots at $9 and rough stock at $7.75 to $8.50 per cwt. weighed off the cars.

In small meats an active trade was done, there being a good demand for sheep and lambs from both butchers and packers and the tone of the market for the latter was stronger with sales of Ontario lambs at $6 to $6.25 per cwt. and Quebec lambs, at $2.25 to $2.75 each. The demand for calves was good and prices ruled firm.

Butchers' cattle, choice, $7 to $7.25; cattle, medium, $6.25 to $6.75; common, $4 to $5; canners, $2.50 to $3.50; choice cows, $5 to $5.25; bulls, $4 to $5; milkers, choice, each, $60 to $70, common and medium, each $40 to $50; springers, $30 to $35.

Sheep—Ewes, $3.75 to $4; bucks and culls, $2.25 to $3.50; lambs, $6 to $6.25. Hogs—F.o.b., $7.75 to $9. Calves—$3 to $10.

Tennyson's Prediction.

Tennyson predicted the day of his death. Just a year before his death friends of the poet were visiting Aldworth House. The late Lord Selborne turned to Tennyson and remarked, "You ought to be happy here." "Ah," sighed the poet, "I have only a year to live!" His hearers laughed at the remark, but it was a prophetic assertion that was verified to the minute.

The Nose Kiss.

The nose kiss exists in races so far apart as the Eskimos of the Arctic and the Maoris of New Zealand.

laborer averaged far better in Ontario than in the west. Not only did he receive practically as high a wage, but expenses being less in Ontario, he was able to save more.

Another important factor to be remembered by the Ontario farm laborer, considering leaving Ontario for the west, was that the grain crop of the west only employed the labor men certain periods of the year, while in Ontario the mixed farming gave steady employment for about eight months of the year, and rather than let a good man go, the farmer will retain him the year round.

An improved system of record keeping which has this season been put into successful operation, keeps a record of where every British immigrant coming to Ontario is placed, and whether or not he is making good. This is a great relief to the relatives in the old country of those who have come over here and have not written home to say how they are getting along, as, with the aid of the record, all enquiries of this nature can be immediately handled. In some few cases it has also proved successful in locating a man wanted by the British police.

Although the tide of immigration exceeds all previous years, the demand for help from the Ontario farmer still remains at practically the same extent unanswered as last year—about twenty-five per cent. greater than the supply of help. This is explained by the fact that while the number of immigrants brought over has greatly increased, the wants of the farmers has increased in proportion. The farmers of Ontario could at the present time place far more help than is at present obtainable, but for the most part express satisfaction at the way the farm labor problem is now being handled by the Government.

Hot Town Is Ottawa.

It seems natural for most eastern Canadians to think of Ottawa as a northern city, and, therefore, to assume that in summer it is comparatively cool. To be sure, Ottawa is considerably north of Kingston, or Toronto or Hamilton, but not north of Montreal, as many residents of Montreal suppose. Ottawa is almost due west of Montreal, but as regards latitude it is a trifle south. The Ottawa Valley—at any rate the northern half—belongs to the Laurentian country; the Laurentian country forms part of our great Northland; and throughout the northland the heat of midsummer is intense.

The nights and mornings are generally cool, but after the sun has climbed a few degrees above the horizon its rays give out a white, intense, burning heat that seems not only to scorch the skin, but to melt the marrow in one's bones. But the air is dry and light, there is no mugginess, and the heat is more easily borne than is the moist warmth of lower altitudes.

It is something of the heat of the Northland that quivers over Ottawa and seems focussed upon Parliament Hill. That is a hill of rock with a thin skin of soil and turf, and it is thrust up into the white sunshine which beats upon it much as the white light of publicity beats upon the men who make Parliament Hill the scene of their labors.

WHO ARE THE "THE'S"?

Celts Who Are Entitled to the Chieftainship of Their Clans.

"Who are the 'The's'?" This is the question asked by the editor of Burke's Landel Gentry, and no one should be better qualified to answer it than he.

The elusive title of "The," of course, is used to indicate the headship or chieftainship of a tribe or clan. In England the title has never existed.
In Wales it has died, but in Scotland and Ireland, says the editor of Burke's, the craving for this old designation is an obsession.

There is an old Scottish saying that in Scotland there are but three "The's," The Chisholm, The Mackintosh, and The Devil. To-day there is much dispute as to who the Chisholm is, while the claimants to the chieftainship of Clan Chattan are legion.

In Ireland the position is clearer, for the right to chiefship was not hereditary, but elective, though the expert admits that "his legal principle of the Irish was much tempered by informality of election, assassination, warfare, and self-assertion."
When Henry VIII. established English law the right of election ceased to exist.

Most of the chiefs, one by one, were made peers, and except possibly in one or two cases the tribal title of "The" was discontinued. Little was heard of it again until the latter half of the eighteenth century. With the exception of The McDermot and The O'Connor Don, both of which have been recognized constantly by the crown, nothing, says the editor of Burke's, in the nature of real proof of right can be offered in substantiation of any of them. Still, in Ireland he admits the following list, which he regards as practically complete:

The Knight of Glyn.
The Knight of Kerry.
The MacDermot, prince of Coolavin.
The MacDermot-Roe.
The MacGillcuddy of the Reeks.
The O'Connor Don.
The O'Donoghue.
The O'Donovan.
The O'Gorman.
The O'Grady.
The O'Kelly.
The O'Morchoe.
The O'Neill.
The O'Tool.
The Fox.
The O'Shea.
The O'Brien (Lord Inchiquin).
The O'Molloy.
The Reilly.
The O'Clery.

But in Scotland the appointment of a commission to inquire into the "Who's Who" of the "The's" is declared to be necessary.

While waiting for a badly wanted authoritative pronouncement the editor of Burke's puts forward the following list of tribal titles for Scotland:

The MacCallein Mor, chief of Clan
Campbell (Duke of Argyll).
The Chisholm.
The Mackintosh.
Chief of Clan Ranald.
The Macpherson.
The McNab.
Chief of Clan Gillean (Maclean, Bt.).
Chief of Clan Gregor.
Chief of Clan Cameron.
Chief of Clan Mackenzie.
Chief of the Clan Mackinnon.
Chief of Clan Chattan.
Chief of MacLeod.
Chief of Glengarry.
Captain of Dunstaffnage

A MIGHTY WARRIOR

General Dumas Was a Colossus
In Size and In Heroism.

HIS AMAZING FEATS OF ARMS.

The Herculean Father of the Famous Novelist Had the Strength of Samson and the Valor of Horatius—His Son Was a Chip of the Old Block.

General Alexandre Dumas, the father of the celebrated French novelist, was a mulatto of herculean build, who was renowned as a tremendous fighter and as a man of marvelous bodily strength.

It is generally believed that he was the model from which his son drew the character of Porthos in the "Three Guardsmen"—the sometimes vain-glorious, sometimes heroic, but always lovable Porthos.

Of the recklessness and daring of General Dumas there can be no doubt, and evidently fear to him was an absolutely unknown quantity. "I had long thought the feats of arms ascribed to him in La Vendee, Italy, and Egypt rather apocryphal, too good to be true," writes M. Jules Claretie in a French paper. "They seemed to combine in one the tours de force of Porthos and the escapades of Chicot. But one day when I had promised to write a short life of the man his grandson put into my hands all the papers relating to the soldier's career, and I then saw that I had before me a real epic, describing a sequence of glorious actions of undoubted authenticity.

"It was, for example, established by official documents that General Dumas, standing, a solitary colossus, at the end of the bridge of Bixen, in the Tyrol, did, like Horatius of old, dispute the passage of it with a cloud of Austrians, whom he sabered and shot one after the other until he had broken his sword and used his last cartridge, and that he then did convert the body of an enemy into a battering ram.

"Again, at the theater one day he was in a box with a lady who had won his affections when a gentleman of the court, pointing at him, remarked to the lady, 'So, marchioness, you have got your negro here.' At which the mulatto, without a word, seized the man by his collar, lifted him from his seat and threw him across the footlights on to the stage.

"His son inherited the father's muscles. Traveling one year in the south of France for the sake of collecting some amusing 'impressions,' he came to Avignon by diligence with the intention of enjoying the well known view of the silhouette of the papal palace.
The diligence, on stopping, was surrounded by porters, who tried to clutch the traveler's luggage. Dumas insisted on carrying his own valise, and this provoked some insolent remarks from the porters.

"'Look,' said one, 'at the big lout who won't let a poor fellow earn a living!'

"'What's so astonishing in that?' replied another. 'He's a nigger. Nature intended him for a drudge.'

To the Manor Born.

Lord Charles Beresford and the Duke of Argyll were traveling together on the Great Western Railway, in England. The only other occupant of their compartment was a prosperous drummer, whose success had been due to natural talent for business rather than to sound education. The noble- men found their companion entertain- ing, so they listened to his talk until a small station in Gloucestershire was reached. Here Lord Charles Beres- ford alighted, and was met by a ser- vant of the people with whom he was going to stay. The drummer, leaned out of the window, open-mouthed and wide-eyed. He saw his lordship bowed into a splendid carriage and driven off down a country lane. Drawing his head within the carriage again he turned to the duke, and said:

"Oos 'im?"

"He is Lord Charles Beresford," the duke replied.

"Well, now!" said the drummer. "Fancy the likes of 'im 'obnobbin' with two cads like you and me!"

Placing His Kick.

On one occasion the professors at a Scotch theological college were made to feel the bitter irony and reckless sarcasm of one of their students. The students residing within the college dined together in the common hall. The fare was mean, consisting gener- ally of rabbits. The students had of- ten grumbled, but as a professor pre- sided at the table none ventured open- ly to complain. Each student asked the blessing by turns. One rose rever- ently and said:

For rabbits young and for rabbits old,
For rabbits hot and for rabbits cold,
For rabbits tender and for rabbits tough,
Our thanks we render, for we've had enough!

Church Built of Bulrushes.

The first place of worship in West- ern Australia was unique in two re- spects—the materials of which it was built and also the several purposes to which it was devoted. This remark- able building was made at Perth by soldiers shortly after their first ar- rival in 1829 and was composed al- most entirely of bulrushes. In addi- tion to its use on Sundays for divine worship, it occasionally served as an amateur theatre during the week and during the whole time as a barracks.

Churchyard Town Hall.

The Isle of Wight possesses a curi- osity in town halls. The municipal headquarters of the town of Brading are actually in the churchyard. In such a solemn place levity will, of course, be at a discount, so probably the city fathers at Brading are a very solid group. The church is an ancient one, and the building which serves the town as a council chamber was probably in early times some adjunct of the church, though exactly what no one seems to know.

"The son did not hesitate to imitate his father's example. He put down his valise, seized one of the porters, took him by the waist, carried him to the parapet of the bridge and held him out over the river, saying:

"Give me your word that you are not the assassin of Marshal Brune!"

"Marshal Brune was assassinated at Avignon, in the white terror, 1815.

"If But, monsieur—

"Swear, I tell you, that you did not assassinate Marshal Brune or I will throw you into the Rhone!"

"The man's face became as white as a sheet, and he gasped out:

"I will swear, monsieur, by all the saints, I did not assassinate him."

"All right," said Dumas, and he threw the wretched man on to the bridge, took up his valise and went on his way, smiling, leaving the porters gasping with wonder.

"To return to the old general, he was coming back from Egypt when his ship was surrounded by some English ves- sels.

"Fight to the last," was the order, and when shot and shell are exhausted blow up the ship sky high."

"All very well, but he could swim and others couldn't. To equalize mat- ters Dumas got two cannon balls, put them into his pockets and said with a laugh:

"Now I shall go all the quicker to the bottom."

"But it was not to be. He was taken prisoner and thrown into a foul dun- geon at Naples, from which he only emerged with his health shattered and his magnificent strength dwindled to the vanishing point."

"Ghastly Hash."

Prof. Grant, of Queen's University, Kingston, a son of the distinguished Principal Grant, was anxious at one stage in his student career to win the approval of Prof. MacNaughton, his instructor in Greek. Accordingly he submitted to a grind of several days on a particular passage of translation, hoping against hope that the fearless and frank professor would call upon him to give the passage before his class.

The day arrived, and Mr. Grant con- fided to a few of his comrades the fact that he had spent much earnest thought upon his Greek, and was in- deed willing to give a demonstration. Whether by telepathic influence or not, Prof. MacNaughton called upon Grant to recite his Greek, and proud- ly the young man arose to bewilder his fellows and his instructor.

At the conclusion he looked up proudly, expecting a nod of approval from the platform, but he caught only a growl of horror-stricken amazement.

"Ghastly hash, Mr. Grant," roared the professor. "Ghastly and impos- sible hash, sir. That is all I have to say."

And Grant's knee-joints collapsed instantly.—Star Weekly.

"Sure! And I saw people sitting on the banks fishing."

"Are you a real, for sure suffra- gette?"

"I certainly am."

"But I never heard of your being ar- rested."

Shortening the Trip.

The great aim nowadays is to get there quickly, and with a view to shortening the time of transit between England and Canada, and incidentally between Europe and America, the latest scheme is a steamship line to Cape St. Charles, on the southeastern coast of Labrador, and thence by train to Quebec. This would shorten the sea voyage by about 900 miles, the distance from Cape St. Charles, which lies in the mainland just to the north of Newfoundland, to Quebec, along the shore of the St. Lawrence River, and as it is about 500 miles from Que- bec to New York by way of Mont- real, a sea voyage of, say, 1,700 miles and 1,400 miles by land is substituted for one of 3,063 miles (Liverpool to New York) by sea, the distance from Liverpool to Quebec, being 2,633 miles. There may be drawbacks to this route, but it is said that there is a good harbor, open all the year round, at Cape St. Charles.—London Financial.

Snow Drifts In Canada.

Many Canadian farmers are gradu- ally discarding the heavy fence rails which had surrounded their property for decades and are erecting service- able wire fencing. The time is not far distant when municipalities will de- mand the removal of all rail or board fences along the public highways of the Province of Quebec for the reason that these form a barrier for drifting snows, and it is almost impossible to maintain a good winter road where they exist.

THE THREE GUARDSMEN

By ALEXANDRE DUMAS

"A scar on his temple," cried D'Artagnan, "and with that white teeth, a piercing eye, dark complexion, black hair and haughty carriage! Why, that's my man of Meung! Have you no information respecting his dwelling?"

"None."

"From whom did you learn the abduction of your wife?"

"From M. Laporte, and I have received—"

"What?"

"I fear I am committing a great imprudence."

"You still keep harping upon that, but I beg leave to observe to you this time that it is too late now to retreat."

"I do not retreat!" cried the bourgeois. "Besides, by the word of Bonacieux—"

"By the word of Bonacieux! That name is familiar to me."

"Very possible, monsieur. I am your landlord. And as it is three months since you came and, engaged, as you must be, in your important occupations, you have forgotten to pay me my rent. As, I say, I have not tormented you a single instant, I thought you would appreciate my delicacy."

The bourgeois took a paper from his pocket and presented it to D'Artagnan. "A letter?" said the young man.

"Which I received this morning."

"Do not seek for your wife," read D'Artagnan. "She will be restored to you when there is no longer occasion for her. If you make a single step to find her you are lost."

"That's pretty positive," continued D'Artagnan, "but, after all, it is but a threat."

"Yes, but that threat is a very serious one."

springing to his sword—"this time he does not escape me!"

Drawing his sword from the sheath, he rushed out of the apartment.

On the staircase he met Athos and Porthos, who were coming to see him. They separated, and D'Artagnan rushed between them like lightning.

"Where are you going?" cried the two musketeers in a breath.

"The man of Meung!" replied D'Artagnan and disappeared.

D'Artagnan had more than once related to his friends his adventure with the unknown. When they entered D'Artagnan's chamber it was empty. The landlord, dreading the consequences of the encounter which was doubtless about to take place between the young man and the unknown, had judged it most prudent to decamp.

CHAPTER VII.

D'Artagnan Begins to Develop Himself.

AT the expiration of half an hour D'Artagnan returned. He had this time again missed his man, who had disappeared as if by enchantment.

While D'Artagnan was running through the streets and knocking at doors Aramis had joined his companions, so that on returning home D'Artagnan found the meeting complete.

"Well!" cried the three musketeers all together on seeing D'Artagnan enter with his brow covered with perspiration and his face clouded with anger.

"Well," cried he, throwing his sword upon the bed, "this man must be the devil in person. He has disappeared like a phantom. Like a shade. Like a

"He took her for the queen!" said D'Artagnan.

"Just so," replied Aramis.

"The fact is," said Porthos, "Aramis is of the same height and something of the shape of the duke, but it nevertheless appears to me that the uniform of a musketeer—"

"I wore a very large cloak," said Aramis.

"In the month of July!" said Porthos. "Is the doctor afraid you should be recognized?"

"I can comprehend that the spy may have been deceived by the person, but the face!"

"I had a very large hat on," said Aramis.

"Oh!" cried Porthos. "What precautions to study theology?"

"Gentlemen, gentlemen," said D'Artagnan, "do not let us lose our time in jesting; let us separate and let us seek the mercer's wife. That is the key of the intrigue."

"Well," said Porthos, "in the first place make a bargain with the mercer, and a good bargain too."

"That's useless," said D'Artagnan. "for I believe if he does not pay us we shall be well enough paid by another party."

At this moment a sudden noise of footsteps was heard upon the stairs, the door was thrown violently open, and the unfortunate mercer rushed into the chamber in which the council was held.

"Save me, gentlemen, save me!" cried he. "There are four men come to arrest me!"

Porthos and Aramis arose.

"A moment!" cried D'Artagnan.

been engaged in earnest inquiries, but had discovered. As to D'Artagnan, he did from his apartment. He con chamber into an observator his windows he saw all come caught; then, having removed the boarding of his floor and remaining but a simple ceiling him and the room beneath, the interrogatories were heard all that passed between quisitors and the accused.

"Has Mme. Bonacieux sent to you for her husband or person?"

"Has M. Bonacieux sent you for his wife or for any son?"

"Has either the one or the other said anything to you by mouth?"

"If they were acquainted with thing they would not question in this manner," said D'Artagnan himself. "Now, what is it to know? Why, if the Duke Ingham is in Paris, and if he had or is not to have some with the queen?"

On the evening of the day arrest of poor Bonacieux was heard at the street door was instantly opened and she one was taken in the mouse.

D'Artagnan flew to his hold himself down on the floor length to listen.

Cries were soon heard moans, which some one appeared endeavoring to stifle. There interrogatories.

"It's a woman. They are her. She resists. They use scoundrels!" said D'Artagnan self.

"But I tell you that I am in the house, gentlemen! I tell Mme. Bonacieux! I tell you to the queen!" said the woman.

"Mme. Bonacieux!" murmured D'Artagnan. "Can I have been as to have found what ever seeking for?"

The voice became more and distinct. A tumultuous movement the wainscoting. The victim as much as a woman could men.

"They are binding her, trying to drag her away!" cried D'Artagnan to himself, springing up floor. "My sword! Good, it side. Planchet!"

"Monsieur."

"Run and seek Athos, Porthos, Aramis. One of the three will be at home; perhaps all

"That's pretty positive," continued D'Artagnan, "but, after all, it is but a threat."

"Yes, but that threat terrifies me. I am not a man of the sword at all monsieur, and I am afraid of the Bastille. I have depended upon you on this occasion, monsieur."

"You have?"

"Seeing you constantly surrounded by musketeers of a very superb appearance and knowing that these musketeers belonged to M. de Treville and were consequently enemies of the cardinal, I thought that you and your friends, while rendering justice to our poor queen, would not be displeased at having an opportunity of giving his eminence an ill turn."

"Without doubt."

"And then I thought that, owing me three months' rent, which I have said nothing about!"

"Yes, yes; you have already given me that reason, and I find it excellent."

"Reckoning still further that as long as you do me the honor to remain in my house I shall never name to you your future rent. And adding to this, if there be need of it, meaning to offer you 50 pistoles if against all probability you should be short at the present moment."

"Admirable! But you are rich, then, my dear M. Boucicieux?"

"I am comfortably off, monsieur, that's all. But"—cried the bourgeois.

"What!" demanded D'Artagnan.

"Whom do I see yonder?"

"Where?"

"In the street, fronting your window, in the embrasure of that door—a man enveloped in a cloak."

"It is he!" cried D'Artagnan and the bourgeois at the same time, having each recognized his man.

"Ah, this time," cried D'Artagnan,

"well," cried he, throwing his sword upon the bed, "this man must be the devil in person. He has disappeared like a phantom, like a shade, like a specter. His flight has caused us to miss a glorious affair, gentlemen, an affair by which there were 100 pistoles and perhaps more to be gained."

He then related to his friends, word for word, all that had passed between him and his landlord and how the man who had carried off the wife of his worthy landlord was the same with whom he had had a difference at the hostility of the Franc-Mennier.

"Your affair is not a bad one," said Athos, "and 50 or 60 pistoles may be got out of this good man."

"But please to observe," cried D'Artagnan, "that there is a woman in the affair, a woman carried off, a woman who is doubtless threatened, tortured perhaps, and all because she is faithful to her mistress."

"Beware, D'Artagnan, beware," said Aramis, "you grow a little too warm, in my opinion, about the fate of Mme. Bonacieux."

At this speech of Aramis the brow of Athos became clouded, and he bit his lips.

"It is not Mme. Bonacieux about whom I am anxious," cried D'Artagnan, "but the queen, whom the king abandons, whom the cardinal persecutes and who sees the heads of all her friends fall one after the other. If I knew where the Duke of Buckingham was I would take him by the hand and conduct him to the queen were it only to enrage the cardinal."

"And did the mercer," rejoined Athos, "tell you, D'Artagnan, that the queen thought that Buckingham had been brought over by a forged letter?"

"She is afraid so."

"Gentlemen," cried Aramis, "yesterday I was at the house of a doctor of theology whom I sometimes consult about my studies."

Athos smiled.

"He resides in a quiet quarter," continued Aramis. "His tastes and his profession require it. Now, at the moment that I left his house"—

Here Aramis stopped.

"Well," cried his auditors; "at the moment you left his house?"

"This doctor has a niece," continued Aramis. "She comes sometimes to see her uncle, and by chance was there yesterday at the same time that I was, and I could do no less than offer to conduct her to her carriage."

"Oh, oh! Then this niece of the doctor's keeps a carriage, does she?" interrupted Porthos, one of whose faults was a great incontinence of tongue. "A very nice acquaintance, my friend!"

"Gentlemen, gentlemen," cried D'Artagnan, who began to get a glimpse of the result of the adventure, "the thing is serious; endeavor, then, not to joke, if possible. Go on, Aramis, go on."

"All at once a tall, dark gentleman—just like yours, D'Artagnan, came toward me, accompanied by five or six men, who followed at about ten paces behind him, and in the politest tone 'Monsieur the Duke,' said he to me, 'and you, madame,' continued he, addressing the lady who had hold of my arm, be so kind as to get into this carriage, and that without offering the slightest resistance or making the least noise."

"He took you for Buckingham!" cried D'Artagnan.

"I believe so," replied Aramis.

"But the lady?" asked Porthos, and to arrest me!"

Porthos and Aramis arose.

"A moment!" cried D'Artagnan, making them a sign to replace their half drawn swords. "On this occasion we don't require courage. We must exercise prudence."

At this moment the four guards appeared at the door of the antechamber, but, seeing four musketeers standing and their swords by their sides, they hesitated to advance farther.

"Gentlemen, you will not oppose our executing the orders we have received?" asked the one who appeared to be the leader of the party.

"On the contrary, gentlemen, we would assist you if it were necessary."

"But you promised me," said the poor mercer in a very low voice.

"We can only save you by being free ourselves," replied D'Artagnan in a rapid, low tone, "and if we appear inclined to defend you they will arrest us with you."

"It seems, nevertheless"—

"Come in, gentlemen, come in!" said D'Artagnan. "I have no motive for defending monsieur. I saw him today for the first time, and he can tell you on what occasion. He came to demand the rent of my lodging. Is not that true, M. Bonacieux? Answer!"

"That's the very truth!" cried the mercer, "but monsieur does not tell you"—

"Silence with respect to me; silence with respect to my friends; silence about the queen above all, or you will ruin everybody without saving yourself. Now, gentlemen, you are at liberty to take away this man!"

And D'Artagnan pushed the half stupefied mercer among the guards, saying to him:

"You are a shabby old fellow, my dear. You come to demand money of me, of a musketeer! To prison with him! Gentlemen, once more, take him to prison and keep him under key as long as possible. That will give me time to pay him."

The guardsmen were full of thanks and left with their prey.

"And now, gentlemen," said D'Artagnan without stopping to explain his conduct, "all for one, one for all, that is our device, is it not?"

The four friends repeated with one voice the formula dictated by D'Artagnan.

"All for one, one for all."

"That's well! Now let every one retire to his own home," said D'Artagnan as if he had done nothing but command all his life. "And attention! For from this moment we are at feud with the cardinal."

When in a house of whatever kind it may be an individual suspected of any crime be arrested the arrest is held secret. Four or five men are placed in ambuscade in the first apartment, the door is opened to all that knock, it is closed after them and they are arrested, so that at the end of two or three days they have in their power almost all the familiars of the establishment. And that is a mouse trap.

The apartment of Master Bonacieux became a mouse trap, and whoever appeared there was taken and interrogated by the cardinal's people. It must be observed that as a private passage led to the first floor, in which D'Artagnan lodged, those who called to see him were exempted from this.

Besides, nobody came thither but the three musketeers. Then had all

"I have only done what every man would have done in my place. You owe me no thanks."

Tell them to arm, to come quickly! Ah, I remember. M. de Treville's."

"But where are you going where are you going?"

"I am going down by the order to be there the soonest possible," said D'Artagnan. "On your part, the boards, sweep the floor the door and run where I bid."

The knocker had scarcely been turned under the hand of D'Artagnan the tumult ceased, steps the door was opened and I sword in hand, rushed into the room of Master Bonacieux, which, doubtless acted as a spring, closed after him.

Then those who dwelt in the unfortunate house, together nearest neighbors, heard stamping of feet, clashing and breaking of furniture, moment after, four men black flew out of the door.

D'Artagnan was conquer much trouble it must be cost only one of the policemen and defended himself for five minutes.

On being left alone with M. Boucicieux D'Artagnan turned to the poor woman reclined. She had been left, upon an arm half fainting state. D'Artagnan examined her with a rapid but not a careless glance.

She was a charming woman, twenty-five years of age, dark hair, blue eyes and a nose turned up, admirable teeth, complexion marbled with rose. There, however, stopped, which might have convinced a lady of rank. The hands were small but without delicacy; the face bespoke the woman of quality.

While D'Artagnan was examining her, M. Boucicieux was standing, close to her, he saw on a fine cambric handkerchief mechanically picked up and under of which he recognized cipher that he had seen on a handkerchief which had nearly cost him his life.

From that time D'Artagnan was cautious with respect to his arms on them, and he placed the one he had just found in Mme. Bonacieux's pocket.

At that moment Mme. Bonacieux covered her eyes.

"Ah, monsieur!" said she, "saved me. Permit me to thank you. Madame," said D'Artagnan.

DOCTORS ADVISE OPERATIONS

Saved by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Swarthmore, Penn. — "For fifteen years I suffered untold agony, and for one period of nearly two years I had hemorrhages and the doctors told me I would have to undergo an operation, but I began taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and am in good health now. I am all over the Change of Life and cannot praise your Vegetable Compound too highly. Every woman should take it at that time. I recommend it to both old and young for female troubles."—Mrs. EMILY SUMMERSGILL, Swarthmore, Pa.

Canadian Woman's Experience:
Fort William, Ont.—"I feel as if I could not tell others enough about the good Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me. I was weak and tired and I could not rest nights. A friend recommended your Compound and I soon gained health and strength and could not wish to sleep better. I know other women who have taken it for the same purpose and they join me in praising it."—Mrs. WM. A. BUFFY, 631 South Vickar Street, Fort Williams, Ontario.

Since we guarantee that all testimonials which we publish are genuine, is it not fair to suppose that if Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has the virtue to help these women it will help any other woman who is suffering in a like manner?

only done what every gentleman would have done in my place. You owe me no thanks."

"Oh, yes, monsieur; oh, yes, and I hope to prove to you that you have not served an ingrate. But what could these men, whom I at first took for robbers, want with me, and why is M. Bonacieux not here?"

"Madame, those men were much more dangerous than any robbers could have been, for they are the agents of M. le Cardinal, and as to your husband, M. Bonacieux, he is not here because he was yesterday evening taken away to the Bastille."

"My husband in the Bastille?" cried Mme. Bonacieux. "Oh, what can he have done? Poor dear man! He is innocence itself!"

And something like a faint smile glided over the still terrified features of the young woman.

"What has he done, madame?" said D'Artagnan. "I believe that his only crime is to have at the same time the good fortune and the misfortune to be your husband."

"But, monsieur, you know then?"—"I know that you have been carried off, madame."

voted to you and who, thanks to a password, would?"

"And if I give you this password," said she, "would you forget it as soon as you had made use of it?"

"By the faith of a gentleman!" said D'Artagnan, with an accent so truthful no one could mistake it.

"But I? Where shall I go in the meanwhile?"

"Do you know no one from whose house M. Laporte can come and fetch you?"

"No; I know no one to whom I dare trust."

"Stop!" said D'Artagnan. "We are near my friend Athos' door. Yes; here it is."

"But if he should be at home and see me?"

"He is not at home, and I will carry away the key after having placed you in his apartment."

"But if he should return?"

"Oh, he won't return. And if he should he will be told that I have brought a lady with me and that lady is in his apartment."

"But that will compromise me sadly, you know."

"Of what consequence can it be to you? Nobody knows you. Besides, we are in a situation in which we must not be too particular."

As D'Artagnan had foreseen, Athos was not at home. He took the key, which was customarily given him as one of the family, ascended the stairs and introduced Mme. Bonacieux into the apartment.

"Here, make yourself at home," said he. "Wait here. Fasten the door within and open it to nobody unless you hear three taps like these"—and he tapped thrice—"two taps close together and pretty hard, the other at a considerable distance and more light."

"That is all well," said Mme. Bonacieux. "Now, in my turn, let me give you my orders."

"I am all attention."

"Present yourself at the wicket of the Louvre on the side of the Rue de l'Echelle and ask for Germain. He will ask you what you want and you will answer by these two words—Tours and Bruxelles. Tell him to go and fetch M. Laporte, the queen's valet de chambre."

"And when he shall have informed him and M. Laporte is come?"

"You will send him to me."

"That is all very well. But where and how shall I see you again?"

"Let that care be mine and be at ease."

D'Artagnan bowed to Mme. Bonacieux, darting at her the most loving glance that he could possibly concentrate upon her charming little person, and while he descended the stairs he heard the door closed and double locked. In two bounds he was at the Louvre. As he entered the wicket of l'Echelle 10 o'clock struck. All the events we have described had taken place within half an hour.

Everything fell out as Mme. Bonacieux said it would. On hearing the password Germain bowed. In a few minutes Laporte was at the lodge. In two words D'Artagnan informed him where Mme. Bonacieux was. Laporte assured himself by having it twice repeated of the exactitude of the address and set off at a run. He had, however, scarcely got ten steps before he young man might easily guess that, and with so weak a man as M. Bonacieux it was most likely the young wife kept the purse. But all this had no influence upon the feeling produced by the sight of Mme. Bonacieux and interest remained nearly foreign to this commencement of love.

D'Artagnan, disposed to become the most tender of lovers, was at the time a very devoted friend. He did not forget his friends. The pretty Mme. Bonacieux was just the woman to walk with in company with Athos, Porthos and Aramis, to whom D'Artagnan would be so proud to display such a conquest. Besides, on pressing occasions, in extreme difficulties, D'Artagnan would become the preserver of his friends.

And M. Bonacieux, whom D'Artagnan had pushed into the hands of the police, denying him aloud, although he had promised, in a whisper to save him. We are compelled to admit to our readers that D'Artagnan thought nothing about him in any way.

D'Artagnan, reflecting on his future loves, addressing himself to the beautiful night and smiling at the stars, reascended the Rue Cherche-Midi or Chasse-Midi, as it was then called. As he found himself in the quarter in which Aramis lived, he took it into his head to pay his friend a visit in order to explain to him why he had sent Planchet to him with a request that he would come instantly to the mouse trap. Now, if Aramis was at home when Planchet came to his abode he had doubtless hastened to the Rue des Fosses, and, finding nobody there but his two other companions, perhaps they would not be able to conceive what all this meant. This mystery required an explanation—at least so D'Artagnan thought.

Paris for two hours past had been dark and began to be deserted. Eleven o'clock struck by all the clocks of the Faubourg St. Germain; it was delightful weather. The house in which Aramis dwelt was situated between the Rue Cassette and the Rue Servandoni.

D'Artagnan had just passed the Rue Cassette and already perceived the door of his friend's house, when he perceived something like a shadow issuing from the Rue Servandoni. This something was enveloped in a cloak, and D'Artagnan at first believed it was a man, but by the smallness of the form, the hesitation of the progress and the indecision of the step he soon discovered that it was a woman. Further, this woman, as if not certain of the house she was seeking, lifted up her eyes to look around her, stopped, went a little back and then returned again. D'Artagnan was perplexed.

"What?" said he to himself. "It would be droll if this late flying dove should be in search of our theological friend's house."

And D'Artagnan, making himself as small as he could, concealed himself in the darkest side of the street.

The young woman continued to advance, for, in addition to the lightness of her step, which had betrayed her, she had just emitted a little cough, which announced a clear sweet voice. D'Artagnan believed this cough to be a signal.

She boldly drew near to Aramis' shutter and tapped at three equal in-

"By a man of from forty to forty-five years of age, with black hair, a dark complexion and a scar on his left temple."

"That is he, that is he; but his name?"

"Ah, his name? I do not know that." "And did my husband know that I had been carried off?"

"He was informed of it." "And does he suspect," said Mme. Bonacieux, with some embarrassment, "the cause of this event?"

"He attributed it, I believe, to a political cause."

"I suspected so myself at first, and now I think entirely as he does. My dear M. Bonacieux has not, then, for an instant suspected me?"

"So far from it, madame, he was too proud of your prudence and particularly of your love. But how did you escape?"

"I took advantage of a moment at which they left me alone, and as I knew from this morning what to think of my abduction, with the help of the sheets I let myself down from the window. Then, as I concluded my husband would be at home, I hastened hither to inform him."

"Of what?"

"Oh, that is not my secret! I must not, therefore, tell you."

"Besides," said D'Artagnan—"pardon me, madame, if, guard as I am, I remind you of prudence—besides, I believe we are not here in a very proper place for imparting confidences. The men I have put to flight will return reinforced. If they find us here we are lost. I have sent for three of my friends, but who knows whether they may be at home?"

"But whither shall we fly? Whither escape to?"

"Let us in the first place get away from this house. When clear of it, we shall see."

And the young woman and the young man, without taking the trouble to shut the door after them, descended the Rue des Fossoyeurs rapidly, turned into the Rue des Fosses-Monsieur-le-Prince and did not stop till they came to the Place St. Sulpice.

"And now what are we to do, and whither do you wish me to conduct you?" said D'Artagnan.

"My intention was to inform M. Laporte by means of my husband in order that M. Laporte might tell us exactly what has taken place at the Louvre in the course of the last three days and whether there was any danger in presenting myself there."

"But I," said D'Artagnan, "can go and inform M. Laporte."

"No doubt you could, only there is one misfortune in it, and that is that M. Bonacieux is known at the Louvre and would be allowed to pass, whereas you are not known there, and the gate would be closed against you."

"Ah, bah!" said D'Artagnan. "There is no doubt you have at some wicket of the Louvre a concierge who is de-assured himself by having it twice repeated of the exactitude of the address and set off at a run. He had, however, scarcely got ten steps before he returned.

"Young man," said he to D'Artagnan, "I have a piece of advice to give you. Have you any friend whose clock is too slow?"

"What then?"

"Go and call upon him in order that he may give evidence of your having been with him at half past 9. In a court of justice that is called an alibi."

D'Artagnan found his advice prudent. He took to his heels and was soon at M. de Treville's. But instead of passing to the saloon with the rest of the world he required to be introduced to M. de Treville's closet. A servant went to inform M. de Treville that his young compatriot, having something important to communicate, solicited a private audience. Five minutes after M. de Treville was asking D'Artagnan what he could do to serve him and what caused his visit at so late an hour.

"Pardon me, monsieur," said D'Artagnan, who had proffed by the moment he had been left alone to put back M. de Treville's clock three-quarters of an hour, "but I thought as it was yet twenty minutes past 9 it was not too late to wait upon you."

"Twenty minutes past 9!" cried M. de Treville, looking at the clock. "Why, that's impossible!"

"Look, rather, monsieur," said D'Artagnan, "the clock shows it."

"That's true," said M. de Treville. "I should have thought it had been later. But what can I do for you?"

Then D'Artagnan told M. de Treville a long story about the queen. He expressed to him the fears he entertained with respect to her majesty. He related to him what he had heard of the projects of the cardinal with regard to Buckingham, and all with a tranquillity and serenity of which M. de Treville was the more the dupe from having himself, as we have said, observed something fresh between the cardinal, the king and the queen.

As 10 o'clock was striking, D'Artagnan left M. de Treville, who thanked him for his information, recommended him to have the service of the king and queen always at heart and returned to the saloon. But at the foot of the stairs D'Artagnan remembered he had forgotten his cane. He consequently sprang up again, re-entered the closet and with a turn of his finger set the clock right again.

CHAPTER VIII.

The Plot Thickens.

HIS visit to M. de Treville being paid, D'Artagnan took his pensive but longest way homeward. He was thinking of Mme. Bonacieux. He already fancied himself, so rapid is the progress of our dreams upon the wings of imagination, accosted by a messenger from the young woman who brought him some billet appointing a meeting, a gold chain or a diamond.

Men then made their way in the world by the means of women without blushing. Such as were only beautiful gave their beauty. Such as were rich gave in addition a part of their money.

D'Artagnan possessed nothing. The mercer had told him he was rich; the D'Artagnan believed this cough to be a signal.

She boldly drew near to Aramis' shutter and tapped at three equal intervals with her bent finger.

The three blows were scarcely struck when the inward casement was opened and a light appeared through the apertures of the shutter.

But the shutter remained closed. Still more, the light which had shone out for an instant disappeared.

D'Artagnan thought this could not last long and continued to look with all his eyes and listen with all his ears. He was right. At the end of some seconds two sharp taps were heard in the interior, the young woman replied by a single tap and the shutter was opened a little way.

It may be judged whether D'Artagnan looked or listened with avidity. Unfortunately the light had been removed into another chamber, but the eyes of the young man were accustomed to the night.

D'Artagnan then saw that the young woman took from her pocket a white object, which she unfolded quickly and which took the form of a handkerchief. She made her interlocutor observe the corner of this unfolded object.

"What could that handkerchief mean?"

Placed where he was D'Artagnan could not perceive the face of Aramis. We say Aramis because the young man entertained no doubt that it was his friend who held this dialogue from the interior with the lady of the exterior. He placed himself close to the angle of the wall, from which his eye could plunge into the interior of the apartment.

Upon gaining this advantage D'Artagnan was near uttering a cry of surprise. It was not Aramis who was conversing with the nocturnal visitor; it was a woman! D'Artagnan, however, could only see enough to recognize the form of her vestments, not enough to distinguish her features.

At the same instant the woman of the apartment drew a second handkerchief from her pocket and exchanged it for that which had just been shown to her. Then some words were pronounced by the two women. At length the shutter was closed. The woman who was outside the window turned round and passed within four steps of D'Artagnan, pulling down the hood of her cloak, but the precaution was too late. D'Artagnan had already recognized Mme. Bonacieux!

Mme. Bonacieux! The suspicion that it was she had crossed the mind of D'Artagnan when she drew the handkerchief from her pocket, but what probability was there that Mme. Bonacieux, who had sent for M. Laporte in order to be reconducted to the Louvre, should be running about the streets of Paris at half past 11 at night at the risk of being carried off a second time?

THEY HAD TO KILL GAME.

So They Couldn't Waste Powder on a Man-Eating Crocodile.

In "Animal Life in Africa" is the following curious narrative, which shows the indifference of the natives of East Africa to the sacrifice of human life:

One morning I was standing on the banks of the Lujenda river, in Portuguese East Africa, watching, with my friend, Mr. Maugham, our stores crossing. We had just come to the conclusion that what we had fancied was the protruding nose of a crocodile was, in fact, only a piece of rock when a local native, who was standing near, said, "If you will come with me to the village I can show you a big crocodile." Mr. Maugham electing to stay and superintend the porters across the river, I went along with the "boy."

The village in question lay but some 300 yards distant and proved to be of considerable size and full of people, who at the moment were in a state of pleasurable and noisy excitement over the arrival of our large caravan. "But surely there can be no crocodile here with all this noise going on?" I remarked. "Oh, yes," nonchalantly replied the guide. "He lives here and does not mind the people."

Sure enough, on reaching the bank the first thing I saw was a huge crocodile basking at full length and with his mouth wide open on a rock not

OTTAWA IN SUMMER.

The Capital Is a Quiet and Very Peaceable Place.

The midsummer visitor finds Ottawa a comparatively peaceful place—in fact, it might be said that perfect peace prevails there at that time, compared with the state of affairs at other seasons.

And the reason of this is, of course, obvious. Parliament is not sitting, and there is something like a truce between the political parties; most of the Cabinet Ministers are away, and nothing new is cropping up in the way of appointments and contracts; only routine business is being pushed ahead in the Departments, and there are few if any pickings to be had by that numerous and eager army that thinks it has served its party, and now thinks the country should serve it.

It is the off season in politics, and to the life of Ottawa this is what an opiate is to the physical life of an individual. In the rotunda of the Russell, and of the new palatial Chateau, too, armchairs are empty that a few months hence will be filled by big, coarse, aggressive men, (who have votes in Parliament, or control votes in the constituencies, and who are planning good things for "the boys," and incidentally for themselves.

The House is in the possession of messengers whose principal duty is to keep cool and now and then show a visitor through the building. To be sure, this summer ringing sounds issue from the chamber of the Commons, but not the ringing periods of eloquence, as was the case half a dozen years ago when Parliament was foolish enough to sit in midsummer.

This summer the ringing sounds are the sounds of hammer and saw plied by workmen putting up an elaborate scaffolding to enable another gang of men to redecorate the chamber. The echoes of their labors resound through the corridors, which a few months hence will echo with the tread of men, who will be called upon to decide in what manner and to what extent Canada shall contribute to her own naval defence.

About the Departments there is some little flutter between nine and ten o'clock in the forenoon and at four in the afternoon, when the Civil Servants come and go to and from their toil. These morning and afternoon parades would almost cause a stranger to imagine that they were composed of the guests of a summer resort. This is probably due to the array of white shoes and equally white duck trousers; but civil servants will be civil servants; and whose business is it any way, so long as they have been regularly appointed?

And what is the use of a country having a capital, if it is not to contain a leisure class of well-groomed officials?

The visitor to Ottawa at any season cannot fail to observe the steady enlargement of the newer parts of the city and the equally steady improvement of the older ones. Life, healthy, vigorous and youthful in its buoyancy and optimism, is everywhere in evidence—in fields subdivided into building lots over which the flags of real estate dealers wave in alluring gaiety in new streets, lined with new houses on whose walls the plaster is still drying; in apartment houses and business blocks that here and there tower over the moderate-sized buildings that for years answered Ottawa's needs, but answer them no longer; in more attractive shop windows; in more tall chimneys pouring forth smoke into the

THE MUSKRAT.

He is a Profitable Little Fellow For the Trapper.

The muskrat plays a vital part in the advance guard of colonization in western and northern Canada.

The rat-lined coat is an elegant and comfortable garment, and fashion has ordained the rat shell (cloth lined) to a place of special distinction among ladies' furs.

The trapper ordinarily receives twelve and a half cents per hide to fifty cents, according to the quality, the season in which it is caught, the care exercised in skinning and stretching, and, lastly and not least, according to his good judgment in placing in a market which will or will not pay well for the same.

It is a comparatively easy task to skin a muskrat. Fleshing the hide requires great care and considerable time. Willows can be bent into stretchers, but the average trapper now endeavors to stretch his rats on thin boards such as are obtainable from packing cases.

The tried pelts find their way to the tanneries, after which they are cut into backs and fronts by the furriers, who make them up for their trade.

The revenue from muskrat pelts is no inconsiderable amount. Count the pelts in your coat, reckon them at thirty-five cents each, which is a good average, and you know approximately what the trapper made. The tanner's charge is comparatively small, probably about ten cents per skin. But by the time the finished garment reaches the wearer, due allowance being made for workmanship, he will likely conclude that someone is still making a good thing of the muskrat trade.

The first thing I saw was a huge crocodile basking at full length and with his mouth wide open on a rock not more than twenty yards away. He was not in the least disturbed by the chattering of the women and children, and there was no question of stalking him. It was only necessary to sit leisurely down on the bank and put a bullet through his shoulder, when, after shutting and opening his mouth a few times, he fell off the rock and sank like a stone.

The headman was quite pleased, saying that the animal took some one, usually a woman or child, at least once a month. "Why, then," I said in astonishment, having noticed that about every second man seemed to be provided with a firearm of some sort, "did you not shoot it?" "Ah, well, we have very little powder, and it is very expensive, and we are poor and require all we have to kill game," was the surprising though characteristic answer.

Vivisection Figures.

From a Home Office return issued recently it appears that the number of experiments made on living animals in Great Britain during last year was 95,293. Only a very small proportion of this formidable total, however, involved serious operations, hypodermic injections, feeding tests, etc., performed without anaesthetics.

Of the balance of 5,690, in which operations were carried out, 3,023 came under the provision of the act, that the animal must be kept under an anaesthetic during the whole of the experiment, and must, if the pain is likely to continue, or if any serious injury has been inflicted, be killed before it recovers from the influence of the anaesthetic.

In the remaining 2,667 cases, the initial operations were performed under anaesthetics, from the influence of which the animals were allowed to recover.

Cancer research was responsible for nearly half of the year's experiments, 41,025 having been performed by 21 licensees, working at nine institutions. Only 835 of these involved serious operations. The remainder were almost entirely inoculations into mice.

Rivals Ste. Anne.

Miraculous cures of no less than first cases of blindness, as many cases of other bodily afflictions, and temporal and spiritual favors dispensed to two hundred others are reported within the last few weeks at the little shrine at Cote des Neiges, behind Mount Royal, where Brother Andre, of the Holy Cross Order, lives in a humble dwelling that is beginning to rival the famous Ste. Anne de Beupre.

So far has spread the fame of the saintly brother and his wondrous miracles, that the members of the order have decided on the erection of a new and greater church to accommodate the huge crowds that daily seek physical and spiritual healing at the shrine.

Pilgrims are now visiting the shrine from all parts of North America.

years answered Ottawa's needs, but answer them no longer; in more attractive shop windows; in more tall chimneys pouring forth smoke into the clear air of the Laurentian country; in imposing railway station and palatial hotel—in these and a hundred other ways the vigorous life and the substantial growth of our federal capital thrust themselves upon the attention of the visitor in winter or in summer. This is the permanent condition, and, of course, the supremely important one.—Montreal Standard.

One Town All Her Life.

Taken to the village of Wellesley, Ont., when a bride and never having been away since up to the present, Mrs. Maria Shelter, aged and feeble, has been taken to Berlin and placed in the House of Refuge. She has reached the age of 88 years, and was a resident of Wellesley Village for about 68 years. She is of German birth and has never known any other tongue.

Mrs. Shelter has never during the 68 years of wedded life, left the limits of the limits of the village. With her husband she lived in a small cottage until his death five years ago. Since then she has lived alone.

Mrs. Shelter in the past 68 years of her life has never seen a train nor a railway track. She had not seen, up to her going to Berlin, any other house than those in the village, or other faces than those visiting or residing in that village.

Mrs. Shelter owns some property in the village, which will provide ample funds for her support during the remainder of her life, and her simple requirements will be supplied at the county house.

A Quaint Statue.

Humor in statues is rare, except of the unconscious type; but the little parish church of St. James, Yarmouth (Isle of Wight), has within its walls "a fine white marble statue of Sir Robert Holmes," a dashing seaman who was Captain of the Wight from 1667 to 1692.

Sir Robert, as well as being an admiral bold, was also a bit of a wag. On one of his nautical raids he captured a French vessel which had on board an unfinished statue intended to represent Le Grand Monarque. Holmes did not make the sculptor, who was on board, walk the plank, but compelled him to finish the statue in the likeness of his captor. The head was the head of Holmes, but the body was that of Louis XIV.

The contrast is striking and humorous, and, as the guide book says, "the statue is well worth a visit," if only to see the incongruity of partnership between a buccaneer face and a regal body.

Exit the Dark Lantern.

The "bull's-eye" lantern of the patrolling policeman may shortly pass into the museums. Electric torches are far handier than the old-fashioned oil-fed "bulls-eye." The policeman has the torch attached to his belt, and the pressing of a button sends a searchlight on the track of a criminal. There are no risks of burnt fingers and damaged tunics. Experiments are being made with the electric torches in the outlying suburbs of London, Eng., and later every Metropolitan and City policeman may be provided with one. Burglars have long known their value, and will not welcome this imitation, however sincere the flattery.

reaches the wearer, due allowance being made for workmanship, he will likely conclude that someone is still making a good thing of the muskrat trade.

And yet all has not been said in regard to the muskrat. He belongs to the groundhog family, and, judging from the usual contents of his stomach—grass and herbs—appears to be a vegetarian. Not infrequently he comes incognito as black squirrel on the bill of fare of fashionable resorts.

But in the west (where a man cannot pack a butcher shop hundreds of miles) when there is nothing else to eat he's just plain rat, and there are days when rain and wind drive ducks, chickens, rabbits and most small game out of sight. At such times, were it not for the tireless muskrat who fords streams, rain or shine, swims, carries mud to build winter houses for his rapidly multiplying connections, many an Indian, half-breed and white trapper would go hungry.

In fact there are few fur-traders, prospectors, or early pioneers who have not from curiosity or necessity eaten muskrat roasted before the camp fire. If the musk bag is removed intact while the animal is still warm the meat is wonderfully good if one is sufficiently hungry; and there is no doubt but that hundreds of people trekking the northwest have avoided hunger and even starvation by making a meal on a toasted muskrat or muskrat sirloin.—L. E. Clendenan in Toronto Globe.

Social Centres Needed.

Mr. Edward Gurney, in a letter to The Christian Guardian, offers some suggestions which have occurred to him after a visit to the West, where he was impressed by the isolation of farm life on the prairie. The life is too lonesome, and means should be found for breaking the monotony of it. He tells of one man whose wife was in an asylum and who remarked that he could not understand it as "she had never beep out of the kitchen for years."

Mr. Gurney sees in church union, to which he found Western people of all denominations favorable, the means of a possible reform. He would have such of the church buildings as union would render vacant transformed into social clubs or meeting places, with libraries established therein, that provision be made for concerts, old-fashioned tea-meetings and moving-picture shows. Mr. Gurney says as to the benefits:

1. The women and children would have something to look forward to.
2. The men would have a centre of social interest far more wholesome than the tavern or grocery.
3. We should add vastly to the power of the church as a centre of moral influence.

If undertaken it should be done by authority of the United Church. It should be entered upon after grave consideration as a department of church work, and should be controlled by the regular officers of the church.

Italian's Narrow Escape.

Toronto, Aug. 20.—While at work on Quebec avenue, near Humberstone avenue, yesterday afternoon, an Italian laborer, whose name was unknown, had a narrow escape from being buried alive. The man was digging out the excavation for a drain when the side collapsed upon him, burying him to his neck in wet sand. Fortunately his fellow workmen saw the cave-in and extricated him as speedily as possible, and the man escaped with a rather severe bruising.

BEAUTY HINTS.

How to Combat Freckles and Sunburn In the Summer.

The woman who suddenly plunges into open air life at the seaside is sure to have trouble with her skin. If her stay is to be a long one she is wise to take a little care at first and then to let the sun and wind do their worst, but it is folly when on a short holiday to get the skin into a painful and disfiguring condition.

When going away to some hitherto unexplored place a packet of powdered borax, oatmeal powder or some other water softener should have a place in one's dressing bag. (One hopes, of course, for rainwater, but only in rare cases is it to be had.)

A slice of lemon in the water jug is a simple little holiday luxury.

It is far better to prevent the sunburn from becoming serious than to have struggles and mortifications on returning to town and conventional dress. If the slices of lemon are available a good plan is to rub them over hands and neck night and morning after washing. The juice may be left on for ten minutes or so, then rinsed off and a little cold cream applied. This must afterward be wiped off in its turn. A common holiday mistake is that of using cold cream too lavishly. A little well rubbed in and finally wiped off is better than a coating left on all night. This latter is apt to choke up the pores and to make the skin over tender, so that it is less fit to suffer the sun's ravages next day.

Buttermilk is an excellent skin bleach and is very soothing to apply after a summer motor spin or a blazing morning on the sands and is said to cure freckles if persistently used.

Freckles are caused by an excess of pigment in the skin. They are result-

COVERING ALFALFA HAY.

Practice Found to Yield Good Results in the Ohio Fields.

The Ohio agricultural experiment station in a circular on "Alfalfa in Ohio" says that harvesting methods have not been found to vary in general from those found best in growing red clover for hay. The first crop, coming earlier than red clover, has less favorable weather, and on this account a number of growers have canvas covers with which to protect the cocks of hay from rain while curing in the field. Most farmers look upon bunching the alfalfa in the field for partial curing as requiring extra labor, besides adding to the risk from the weather.

There is one advantage in harvesting alfalfa often that may in part offset the less favorable weather conditions, and that is, owing to its being thin upon the ground, it dries more quickly. The shorter period of growth produces stems that are smaller than those of red clover, which is also an advantage in curing.

The experience of growers is that alfalfa hay will stand more rain than red clover without injury. Hay that has remained on the field during rainy weather and is later removed solely to prevent injury to the following crop has been greedily eaten in so many instances by stock grazing upon good pasture that those who have had such an experience no longer throw away weathered alfalfa hay.

One Champaign county grower has concluded that the loss of moisture that takes place in the heavy alfalfa in the forenoon is more rapid in uncured hay than in that cut in the early morning, while it is full of the moisture accumulated during the night. For this reason he does not start the mower until about noon. When this plan is followed the rake is often started to advantage the following morning, as soon as the dew is off. Especially is

"I wish to tell you of the great good 'Fruit-a-tives' have done for me. For years, I was a martyr to Chronic Constipation and Stomach Trouble. I was greatly run down and my friends feared I had Consumption. I tried numerous doctors and all kinds of medicines, but received no relief until advised to try 'Fruit-a-tives' by Mr. McCready of St. Stephen, and am pleased to say that I now enjoy excellent health. 'Fruit-a-tives' are the best medicine made, and I strongly advise my friends to use them."

HUGH MCKENNA:

"Fruit-a-tives" is the only medicine that will positively and completely cure Constipation. This wonderful compound of fruit juices acts directly on the liver, causing this organ to extract more bile from the blood, and to give up more bile to move the bowels regularly and naturally.

and turpentine with which to rub the head and throat, using a small swab.

Place a shallow pan with a little kerosene in it where the hens have to walk through it in entering their night quarters, and mites are not apt to give trouble.

One good general rule to follow in feeding for eggs is to feed lightly in the morning in order to get the hens exercising from the start. Let them go to bed at night with full crops.

A poultryman with experience of twenty years says there is no feed on earth that is so good for young chickens or old fowls as sour milk, clabbered milk or cheese curd made from sour milk.

A corn ration will put on fat just as fast in summer as in winter. For this reason the flock of laying hens should be fed sparingly of corn and should be made to dig and scratch for the small grain they get.

Ducks require more bulky food than turkeys or chickens; hence steamed clover hay, green food, turnips, potatoes and the like should be given them. Even bran is preferable to heavier foods, and always there should be a

INCOMES FOR NOTHING.

Curiosities of the Pension List in the Old Country.

Great Britain pays away between $125,000 and $150,000 a year in annuties and pensions, and the majority of the recipients have done nothing to deserve them. They get the money because they happen to be the descendants of individuals who, long ago, were awarded these annuities.

Among the largest of these perpetual pensions is that received by the Duke of Richmond and Gordon, which runs into $90,000 a year. The origin of this payment goes away back to the days of Queen Elizabeth who received a duty of 24 cents on every chaldron of coal shipped out of the River Tyne and used in England. This duty was paid to her successors until Charles II. gave it away to the first Duke of Richmond. He and his heirs received it for more than a century, till, in the time of George III., it was commuted for the present yearly sum, which is known in the Exchequer as the "Richmond Shilling."

Another instance is that of the Schomberg pension which William
III. bestowed on a favorite Hollander of that name for his military services.
He granted the sum of $20,000 a year to this family in perpetuity and, though portions of it have been commuted or sold in a lump sum to the Government at different times, there is still paid out over $3,500 yearly to people who are in some remote way connected with the original Schombergs. Another of the same King's annuities is still being paid to the heirs of Lord d'Auvrequerque, Henry de Nassau, his heirs and assignees, for ever, in consideration of his "many and faithful services," even though they were of a rather sinister political nature. Ten thousand dollars was the original sum, but that has been commuted by successive heirs till, at the present day, the yearly annuity is reduced to $1,850.

In the reign of Charles II. a duty upon imported wine was presented to the first Duke of Grafton, Henry Fitzroy. In the beginning of last century the then Duke commuted this duty for the yearly pension of $35,220, and his fortunate successors yet receive this ample income, for which they have done nothing.

A conspicuous case is that of Lord Nelson, who is paid $25,000 a year by the nation just because he is the holder of the Nelson title, though not descended directly from the famous admiral. This comfortable annuity is assured to "all and every the heirs male of the title to whom of Earl Nelson shall descend."

As "ancient fees" the sums of $340 and $100 yearly are respectively paid to the Duke of Norfolk and the Duke of Rutland, though no one can accurately say how they arose, nor do these annuities incur any obligations whatsoever except the pleasant one of receiving them.

But commoners as well as dukes and lords have their share of the "swag" for doing nothing. The Law Courts alone pay over $70,000 in annuities, many of which are for compensation of abolished offices.

until about noon. When this plan is followed the rake is often started to advantage the following morning, as soon as the dew is off. Especially is this true in the case of crops harvested late in the season, when the conditions are more favorable for curing.

Handling the Bull.

I have lately learned of a novel plan to care for a bad bull at pasture which is so simple that every farmer should know it, says a correspondent of Hoard's Dairyman. Put a strap around the neck of a cow, same on bull, and use an eighteen inch chain with a swivel in center of chain to chain them together and turn them out.
They soon become used to this, the same as oxen, and can do no damage to any one. If you wish to use the bull just untie him for the time.

*****
If the farmer would take just one-half day off and help the women folks arrange some flower beds and trim the shrubbery about the yard the home surroundings would be more attractive and inviting to the farm boys and girls.

With the Feathered Folk.

For colds or any head ailments of poultry take even parts of vaseline clover hay, green food, turnips, potatoes and the like should be given them.

Even bran is preferable to heavier foods, and always there should be a trough of cracked oyster shells accessible to them.

Feats of the Walking Parson.

The fame of the Rev. A. N. Cooper, vicar of Filey, England, has spread far beyond his parish. He is known throughout the country as "The Walking Parson," a sobriquet which he has long earned by his long tramps.

Mr. Cooper had the opportunity of developing his pedestrian powers when he was appointed curate of Chester-le-street, in the county of Durham. His parish was scattered over a wide area, and consequently he soon became a hardy walker. Desiring to see a little of the world in as economical and pleasant a manner as possible he shouldered his knapsack, and visited many interesting spots on the continent. For a considerable number of years he has followed this practice, and some remarkable tramps stand to his credit. He has walked to Rome, Pompeii, Venice, Budapest, Copenhagen, and there are few continental beauty spots with which he is not familiar.

During his walk to Rome Mr. Cooper averaged twenty-eight miles a day, and took five weeks over the walk.
With a knapsack on his shoulders he does not experience the slightest difficulty in reeling off thirty miles or so daily, and this despite the fact that he has passed his sixtieth birthday.

Mr. Thorpe Tice Goes to Napanee.

A rumor reaches us that Mr. Tice has resigned the principalship of the Model School here and accepted, at an advanced salary, a similar situation in the Napanee Model School. Here, decidedly Picton's loss is Napanee's gain. Mr. Tice is a strong and energetic teacher, knowing the whole gamut of his profession, and using the most modern and intelligent methods in the classification and instruction of classes. He is an excellent and thoughtful disciplinarian, and carries with him the wholesome respect and love of his pupils, as well as that of the general public. His power of expression is direct and finished, and no audience will tire under him if he once takes the platform. We congratulate the Trustees of the Napanee school on the judgment they have shown.—Picton Gazette.

Destroyed by Fire.

About noon on Saturday last the home of Mr. Walter Exley, sr., South Napanee, was badly gutted by fire.
The blaze evidently started in the frame kitchen located at the rear of the dwelling. An alarm was rung in, but considerable time elapsed before the engine could be placed and the hose laid. Over 2500 feet of hose had to be used and by the time everything was in readiness the fire had reached the roof of the main dwelling, and it was burned off and the interior badly damaged. In the meantime neighbors and friends with the assistance of the firemen, tried every means in their power to check the spread of the fire but to no avail. All the contents of the main part of the house was safely removed. Mr. Exley carried about $1600 insurance.

WOOD - At Richmond, on Friday

46 years, 18 days.

Camp Le Nid has just concluded its twenty-seventh annual session and the members in attendance representing Chicago, New York, Pittsburgh, Baltimore, Toronto, North Bay and Napanee all agree that no pleasanter holiday was ever spent upon the point. The addition of a fireplace to the bungalow was a timely improvement which counteracted some of the cold weather during the camping season. The fishing was fair but no large hauls were made. A mess of fresh perch can be obtained at any time with very little effort and for table use this innocent little fish is regarded as equal to any other in these waters.

PRESENTATION AND ADDRESS

Monday evening Mr. C. H. Edwards was the recipient of an address and a purse of gold, a small token of the esteem and respect in which he is held by his fellow citizens. The event took place at 7.30 o'clock.

Mr. R. G. Travers read the address and made the presentation.

Mr. Edwards in replying said that during his thirteen years stay in Napanee he had had made many pleasant acquaintances which would always bear remembrance. Particularly so was this true of his associates and acquaintances in the Curling Club. He almost fancied that some clear, crisp and cold winter's night, if he were to take himself off to Parliament Hill, Ottawa, (his new home) he could almost hear the shouts of the enthusiastic curlers at Napanee. Mr. Edwards also made some reference as to his effort along educational lines during his sojourn in Napanee.

Following is the address :

MR. C. H. EDWARDS,

Napanee, Ont.

Dear Mr. Edwards :

Your friends in Napanee have learned with mingled feelings of sorrow and pleasure, that you are about to leave our town and remove to Ottawa ; with sorrow that our school will lose an able and painstaking teacher who has a claim upon the respect and good will of every family in town, whose children have passed through your hands and also with a certain degree of pleasure and satisfaction at your promotion to a wider field of usefulness which will afford greater scope for your ambition as an educationist.

While you will be missed in the social circle and in the sporting associations of the town, particularly the Curling Club, the loss to the cause of Education in Napanee will be great indeed as the success of very many of our young men and women has been largely due to the systematic method of study inculcated by you.

As a slight token of the esteem in which you are held by the friends you leave behind you, we ask you to accept this purse of gold from them with the sincere wish that success will crown your efforts in your new sphere of action and that happiness and prosperity will fall to the lot of yourself and your good family.

Dated at Napanee this 26th day of August, 1912.

Signed on behalf of the citizens committee.

R. G. H. Travers.
